

Reflections on Probability

John Lamperti

Dartmouth

Thursday, January 10, 2002

102 Bradley Hall, 4:00 pm
(Tea 3:30 pm Math Lounge)

Abstract

I will discuss in general terms some of the classical themes and problems of probability theory. Then I will describe some of the problems on which I worked years ago, and consider whether those results could form a coherent addition to the theory. Warning: There will be no proofs, only a bare mention of techniques, and no recent research results in this talk.